SHIRT WAISTS.

What is it that I hear each day,
As near the Buford House I stray?
What is it makes my hair turn gray?
'Tis shirt waists.

When to my room I now repair,
To try and find some comfort there,
What is the first sound that I hear?
'Tis shirt waists.

And when I venture just a word,
And think perhaps I shall be heard,
I find all other talk deferred
For shirt waists.

When from my slumber I arise,
As rosy dawn lights up the skies,
What is it that greets my eyes?
'Tis shirt waists.

And when I lay me down at night,
In sleep to shut all things from sight,
A vision comes, in colors bright,
Of shirt waists.

When to my meals I go with glee,
Thinking that there I shall be free,
Great heavens! on every hand I see
Those shirt waists.

When'er I pass the ladies now,
And doff my hat and smile and bow,
They do not say a thing, I vow,
But shirt waists.

What is it makes me swear and rave,
And wish that I was in my grave,
And for oblivion always crave?
'Tis shirt waists.

What is it that brought this blight
On me, who once was gay and bright?
What keeps me always in fright?
'Tis shirt waists.

What was it made me feel so bad?
What took the cash I once had?
'Twas nothing but this crazy fad
Of shirt waists.

No more I walk the streets at will,
But slink around with foxy skill
To dodge the chap who totes the bill
For shirt waists.

And when at last my life is o'er,
I ask for this and nothing more,
To reach some fair and happy shore
Where there's no shirt waists.

A Twelve-Year-Old Hustler.

Lula Register.
There is a boy in this town that you would do well to keep your eye on. His name is Lawrence Wheeler. He is only 12 years old, but he is the oldest of a family of seven children, and his parents are poor. But that boy is a hustler. We got acquainted with him nearly a year ago, when he began to strike us for jobs. And ever since then we have never seen him when he wasn't busy, either doing something or hunting something to do. We never saw him sneaking around a corner to smoke a cigarette, and we never saw him loafing or hearing an idle or insolent word from his lips. For a long time he sold cobs around town wherever he could find a customer, but here of late he has taken the oil wagon and is going to see what he can do with that. He has no horse of his own, but he told us in a simple and unaffected way that several men had offered to help him buy one. Of course they have. Don't you suppose that every man in town who knows that boy is his friend and wants to help him along? His family have recently moved into town, and Lawrence has undertaken to keep up the rent—$6.25 a month—as his share of the family expenses, in addition of course, to clothing himself. We found out all these things by asking him, not by any self-praise or complaint of his. He doesn't seem to think he is doing anything uncommon, or that he deserves special credit. He takes it all as a matter of course and goes about it as if he were already a man. And he is a man, God bless him, for all his twelve years.

Banquet Without Wine.

Selected.
It was a men's banquet, too, the anniversary of the Bookkeeper's Beneficial Association of Philadelphia. Water was the only beverage save the coffee that followed the dessert. Of course all good business men will be glad to have their bookkeepers sober. They will do their work better and be more likely to keep their employers' business secrets. Workmen and employees of all kinds are learning how much better it is for them to be sober, total abstainers; but how long it has taken them to find it out.

Your Boy Went Live a Month.

So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill St., South Gardner, Mass., was told by his doctors. His son had Lung trouble, following Typhoid Malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying: "Your boy went live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery and a few bottles restored him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in the world for Lung trouble. Trial Bottles Free at E. T. Whitehead & Co.'s Drug Store.

ABOUT GRAND MOTHER.

GRAND DAUGHTER'S WORK.

The Educated Married Woman.

Leslie's Weekly.

A strong prejudice exists in many quarters against the direct earning of money by married women. In several cities they are not allowed to teach in the public schools. Similar discriminations, often wisely, are made in many factories and mercantile establishments. It is properly considered that a married woman's place, especially if she have children, lies in her home, unless the search for bread forces her abroad. But there is also still, even among intelligent people, a tacit reproach to a husband if he allows his wife to work for money in any department, even if she does her work at home, though it would seem that modern conditions must soon become obvious enough to show even the most conservative that the old theories of the necessary idleness of, and ivy- (poison ivy?) like clinging of the wife to her husband, are no part of the new woman's doctrine, and that, even if she must work to help her husband keep up the common home, she may prefer her own way of doing it. The average education of the woman of to-day is probably fifty per cent better than that of her grandmother. Where the grandmother's sole means of proving her desire to be a helpmeet to her husband was the churning of his butter and the weaving of his garments, there are now a hundred accomplishments at her granddaughter's finger-ends. The loom, spinning-wheel, and churn have almost disappeared, and they have left a fortunate leisure. Even on our farms modern conveniences have wonderfully conserved the time and strength of women.

Painting and drawing, in all the ramifications of those arts; writing for the magazines and newspapers; embroidery and other fancy work—all done for pay—occupy a considerable portion of the time of certain women in every community. Almost any educated woman of small means would rather write an article for a magazine and use the money, even if she made nothing on the transaction, to pay a dressmaker than to do her dressmaking herself. She would rather paint a vase and hire a scrub-woman with the proceeds than to do her own house-cleaning, even when she is amply strong enough for the work.

In the old days it was considered honorable enough, indeed indispensable, that a woman should help her husband by performing hard and menial work in her kitchen. Now that she can do, and prefers to do, a higher kind of labor, and to employ some poorer woman to do the drudgery, is she any less a helpmeet to her husband? In every household of moderate means the mistress must either do a vast deal of routine and mechanical work herself, or she must earn the money to pay some one else for doing it. Her education and her training are worth little to her unless she can do this and do it efficiently. The modern educated woman does it, and usually does it well—and instead of being flouted for it, she should be praised. Her husband is no loser by it, in either estate or happiness. The strength and cheerfulness conserved in the woman by performing a congenial instead of an uncongenial task make her a far more lovable and companionable wife; and if this process is widely practiced the gaiety of nations must be materially increased thereby.

The educated married woman of to-day is usually just as faithful to her husband and her home as her grand mother was. She only demonstrates her spirit in a different way—one which is no less honorable either to her husband or to herself.

Undesirable Immigrants.

Youths' Companion.

In the month of March nine thousand and Italian immigrants landed at New York. In April the influx continued at a heavier rate. Three thousand arrived in two days; four thousand more were known to be on the way, and from eight to ten thousand were waiting shipment at Italian ports.

Financial conditions and the dread of being conscripted to serve in the war with Abyssinia are causes which in part explain this sudden accession of immigrants. Another cause, in the opinion of the Commissioner of Immigration at New York, is the fear that Congress will enact the proposed law exacting an educational test of immigrants. The Italians hasten to get into the country before any measure excluding them can be passed.

About one-half of the Italian immigrants arriving at New York this spring are unable to read or write. Fifty cents each was found to be the average sum of money possessed by a party numbering about one thousand who were detained at one time for examination. One in ten only of the immigrants had a ticket to carry him beyond New York.

Existing laws direct the enforced return of the immigrants who are likely to become a public charge, and several hundred of the Italians were sent back under that clause; but to many of the most thoughtful students of American social and industrial conditions it seems clear that the present restrictions should be increased, and the application of a reading and writing test, for the purpose of sifting out and sending back the illiterate, seems the form of restriction most consistent with our institutions.

Household Hints.

Selected.
Celery is one of the most valuable of foods and is a positive remedy for sufferers from rheumatism, nerve troubles and nervous dyspepsia.

To remove tar from any kind of cloth, saturate the spot and rub it well with turpentine, and every trace of the tar may be removed.

Water carrying a little salt in solution is said to be an excellent wash for tired or inflamed eyes, when stronger solutions may prove injurious.

If brooms are dipped in a pail of hot suds for a minute or two once a week it will make them tough and pliable and they will last much longer.

The discovery that cold coffee is an excellent tonic for growing plants should do away with the last remnants of the custom of watering over cold coffee.

For a sprained ankle, immersion for fifteen or twenty minutes in very hot water following this an application of bandages wrung out in hot water is recommended as the best treatment.

The only method of cleansing jewelry without scratching it is to wash in hot soapsuds to which a few drops of ammonia have been added, and then placing the jewelry in a box of jeweler's sawdust to dry.

Tea or coffee stains in linen may be removed by moistening the spots with water and holding them over the fumes of a burning match. Then wash immediately with water in which a little ammonia or soda has been dissolved.

Silks or ribbons that are to be packed away should be rolled in brown paper, as the chloride of lime in white paper will discolor them. White satin should be folded in blue paper and a brown paper put out side and pinned closely together at the edges.

A simple disinfectant to use in a sick room is made by putting some ground coffee in a saucer and in the center a small piece of camphor gum. Light the gum with a match. As the gum burns slow the coffee to burn with it. The perfume is refreshing and healthful as well as inexpensive.

A shelf over the door in a dining-room is an excellent place for large and highly colored pieces of china, which may thus be made very ornamental to the room. Many of the new houses are finished with a narrow shelf around the dining-room walls at the height of the door; it is intended for plaques.

The Largest American Mule.

St. Louis Republic.
The largest mule that ever walked on American soil is now, or was recently, the property of one George H. Johnson, a farmer living a few miles away east of Honey Grove, Texas. His muleship is exactly 18 1/2 hands, or 6 feet 2 inches, in height, being exactly 7 1/2 inches higher than the famous Los Pecos (Old Mexico) mule, which was so widely advertised in 1890-91 as being "the most gigantic specimen of the mule family the world has ever known." The Honey Grove mule is not slim and raw-boned, but is built in proportion to his height, weighing 1619 pounds.

TESTED THE SOLDIER'S NERVE.

An Incident Showing the Perils of Life in the Jungles of India.

New York Mercury.

The bluff old major from the queen's army had listened attentively to the campfire tales of his companions. He put a fresh charge of fragrant tobacco in the veteran pipe that he had been smoking, and the three occupants of the compartment lapsed into expectant silence, waiting to hear from him.

"The bravest man I ever met was not on the field of battle," he began. "He was a soldier, but I know little about his military record, and yet when I say he was the bravest man I ever knew I think I know what I am talking about. We were campaigning in India, and for some months the command had simply been idling time away. We were all thoroughly tired of routine military inactivity, and finally a party of five of us secured a two weeks' leave of absence, which we proposed to spend in a hunt for big game."

"One of our number was a senior regimental officer, who had been through ten years' service in India. He had been the guiding spirit of our expedition. Seated a few feet away from him and to his left was a young junior company officer, who had but recently joined the command. We had been eating fruit, which was of a kind that bears a very peculiar scent. It is a tradition that this native fruit has a strong attraction for several varieties of venomous reptiles, which are peculiar to that climate. I at least am convinced that there is something more than tradition in it.

"As I have said, we were talking of adventures when, in a moment of silence, the bluff old regimental officer, looking steadily at the young lieutenant to his left, slowly said:

"Do you think you could keep your presence of mind under the most trying circumstances, when your life depended upon your coolness and courage?"

"Dead silence followed the colonel's question, and the young officer, looking quizzically at his interrogator, replied:

"Yes, I think I could."

"Then the time has come when you must be put to the test. Move not a muscle until I tell you, or you are a dead man."

"Then the bronzed old warrior slowly drew his pistol from his holster, and, taking deliberate aim, he fired a shot at the very feet of the man to whom he had addressed his ominous question. For the space of a second we all sat like statues; then the colonel, in a tone of relief, exclaimed:

"It's all right now, boys. I've killed it!"

"We were all on our feet in an instant, eager to know what danger had threatened our young comrade. At his feet lay the coiling, squirming body of a huge cobra, the most venomous reptile that haunts the jungles of India. I think the man who calmly faced that danger was the bravest man I've ever met," said the Major, and no one dissented.

A Novel Door Bell.

New York Journal.
A door bell for deaf mutes is the invention of a deaf mute. There is something paradoxical in the suggestion of such a thing, but it exists, and has a very reasonable scientific explanation.

The ear of a deaf mute is not sensitive to the little vibrations of air that in the normal ear is recognized as sound, but it instantly perceives anything like a jar, or such a thing as the rumbling of a train. When any one goes to the home of a deaf mute and pulls the knob, no bell rings. The deaf mute's ear would not perceive that. But a heavy metal ball falls off its support to the floor.

It makes a vibration and a jarring in the floor that is at once perceived by the sensitive nerves of the deaf mute housewife, and answers all the purposes of the bell. The contrivance has been patented.

The Stone Saved His Life.

Selected.
In Lincoln Cathedral there is an especially beautiful Rose-window, filled with old glass that shines like a jewel. But in the middle of this famous window there is a great hole. How came it there, and why is it left? It is said that an Italian wrought that window. Day and night he toiled at it, till at length it was finished. Absorbed in his beautiful work, he walked back on the lofty scaffolding to get a more perfect view of it. Another step and he would be over the edge. A man down below saw his danger; to shout out to him would be only to startle him, and to hasten to his doom. The man did the only thing that could have saved him: he took up a loose stone, which was lying on the unfinished pavement, and dashed it right through the window. The artist started forward to save his work, and in trying to save his work he saved his life. The broken window was left in memory of his marvelous escape.

God may have smashed your finest efforts, broken the strong resolve, and the good conduct you have been slowly building up, that He may save your eternal life, which is "not by might, not by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord."

Have a militant purity within you that, like a sword of God, rushes down to smite everything foul, base and low. Mere passion purity, the purity of which the noblest utterances is, "I know how to take care of myself," and which is intent on saving its own abaster skin, is like pond. It is only with the greatest care and labor it can be kept clean and free from foul, stagnant overgrowth, and able to reflect the pure light of heaven. But purity in action, the purity that goes forth to help and save others, is like the lovely mountain stream that comes flashing down from the heights, with its heart the home of the sunbeam, too living as it bounds along to take the delinquents of earth.

North Carolina at Chicago.

The Exposition Bulletin for the Southern States Exposition at Chicago, August, September and October, sends out opinions as to the hearty cooperation of the Southern States. Of North Carolina it says:

"The old North State will certainly be in the exposition at Chicago. She was there before, and derived so much benefit from the experience, that she could not be kept out of the present undertaking. The State has now in such condition that it could soon be sent to Chicago, an exhibit of great value and utility. This will doubtless go to Chicago and be largely augmented. Active steps are being taken in North Carolina to have the State represented at Chicago. Men like the following are working in that State: C. G. Latta, Raleigh; W. J. Andrews, Raleigh; R. M. Miller, Charlotte, and Hon. Julius Carr.

A wealthy citizen of North Carolina, who is co-operating in the work of his State, said recently, 'My State shall send a great exhibit to Chicago if it can be done with my private means.' Men like these, it goes without saying, are what make States go."

A Foreign Tongue.

An English journal says that some members of a German ship's crew had occasion to visit a ship-building yard in England, and in the course of their peregrinations entered a paintshop where two Irishmen were at work.

The visitors talked together in their own tongue. The Irishmen understood nothing of what was said, and at last one of them could not restrain his curiosity.

"I say, Mike," said he to his fellow-laborer, "and do you know what these fellows are saying?"

"Arrah, now, Pat," answered the second man; "don't be showing your ignorance. They're speakin' shorthand."

SUCCESS

Perseverance always brings it. While Edison and others have started the world time and again with wonderful inventions, those who searched after a constitutional cure for RHEUMATISM were baffled until recently.

RHEUMACIDE.

Is the happy culmination of the inventive genius and persistent efforts of a Southern chemist. It is composed of 14 ingredients, only two of which were ever tried by medical men for rheumatism. It is, therefore, a new discovery, and the most powerful blood purifier known. A trial will convince.
